Morrilton Doctor sued for $135,000

PERRYVILLE (UP)—A $135,000 damage suit by a Perry county brickmason accusing a Morrilton physician for an alleged unauthorized operation opened here Monday.
 Jess Eubanks, 41, said he suffered leg wound in a hunting accident July 4, 1955, and Dr. H. B. Mobley was to have removed the bullet two days later. Instead, Eubanks claims, the doctor attempted to remove a blood clot, and made a second incision to tie off the artery.
 A witness said the doctor stopped circulation to the leg, which was amputated four months later at Veterans Hospital in Little Rock. Attorneys said the suit was unusual, since Eubanks does not charge malpractice.

Temperatures to Rise But More Rain

By UNITED PRESS
 Rising temperatures and more rain today revived a dying flood threat in the nation's snow-buried East. Heavy rains, meanwhile, swelled rivers and streams in the Midwest and in California.
 The U.S. Weather Bureau said a rain belt extending from the upper Ohio Valley into southern New England was accompanied by a boost of temperatures along readings recorded early today in the Northeast.

 Although the heavy rains and sudden thaw necessary to convert mountainous snow drifts into quick-moving flood waters were not expected, the forecast showed the Northeast was not yet out of the woods.

On the West Coast, mud slides were triggered in northern California areas by a storm that dumped almost an inch and a half of rain Monday.

The Consumnes River spilled into farmlands and near danger levels were recorded along the lower Mokelumne and San Joaquin rivers.

More rivers rose in the Midland in the wake of torrential rains with general flooding predicted for the Osage, Meramec and Gasconade rivers, in Missouri and on the Big Muddy in Illinois. Five southern Missouri state highways were closed by high waters.
 A storm centered over the southeastern part of the nation caused widespread rain and snow from the middle Mississippi Valley across most of the South and middle Atlantic states. About three-quarters of an inch of rain fell at Anniston, Ala., and Charleston, S.C., during a six-hour period ending Monday night. There also were widespread showers over the Rockies and the Northwest.

Drinking Lunch Poses a Problem

LONDON (UP)—Today's poster: Is it unparliamentary to say a lawmaker drank his lunch?
 Some back-bench members of Parliament think it is. They spoke up after Socialist Robert Edwards interrupted a speech by Conservative Dudley Williams and accused him of "having his lunch out of a bottle."
 Furthermore, Edwards added, "it is the bottle which is speaking—and not the honorable member."
 The deputy speaker of the House of Commons, Sir Charles Maudslayi, was asked by the

In a third huge chunk separated from the remainder of the wreckage some 200 feet away. Four persons walked away from this bit of wreckage.

The gasoline-fed flames from the right wing lighted the clear, dark night while rescue workers a few yards away fought in oozy, black slime to get the survivors aboard helicopters and ambulances.

Most of the survivors—as well as the bodies of the victims—were covered with the smelly muck when they reached hospitals.

The plane with 15 passengers and nine crew members aboard was en route to Rio with scheduled stops at Panama, Lima, Peru, and Sao Paulo, Brazil. A company spokesman said the flight was actually delayed 24 hours because the airplane scheduled to make the flight did not arrive in Miami in time.

The original flight had been booked to near capacity but, the delay caused several passengers either to cancel or to take other lines to South America.

Retarded Children Taken From Parents

MADISON, Wis. (UP)—Three retarded children who claimed their parents gave preferential treatment to their normal brothers and sisters will not be returned to their home.
 Instead, they will be referred to child welfare authorities and Juvenile Court for placement in foster homes. Dist. Atty. Joseph Bloodgood said Monday.

Bloodgood said, however, that investigation showed "no grounds for any criminal charge of abuse or neglect" and approved early charges the children were "imprisoned" in a cold attic.

The children, boys, aged 12 and 15, and a girl, 14, had pleaded with a policeman to adopt them because of alleged mistreatment. It had been found the three were severely punished and treated differently than their four brothers and sisters. Bloodgood said but they had not been physically abused or malnourished.

Bulgarian May Be Replaced by Khrushchev

By CHARLES M. MCCANN
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 Experts on Russian affairs are reporting that Nikita Khrushchev may be replaced as Soviet Premier.

The Supreme Soviet (parliament) meets in Moscow on Thursday following the parliamentary election of March.

It is customary for members of the Soviet government to offer their resignations after an election. Usually, the resignations are a formality and members are reappointed.

But it is being suggested that Communist Party leader Nikita S. Khrushchev, as the No. 1 man on the Soviet collective leadership, may take advantage of the opportunity to pull the rug out from under Bulgarian, the No. 2 man.

It has long been suggested that Bulgarian might be replaced, and made president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet—a post corresponding to the president of the West European Republics.

In that event, Bulgarian would succeed Klementie E. Voroshilov, who is 77 and has long been ready to retire.

But the present speculation is due to the fact that Bulgarian has never been called upon to pay for the big blunder he made last June.

It was then that Vyacheslav M. Molotov, Georgi M. Malenkov and Lazar M. Kaganovich tried to overthrow Khrushchev and reinstitute a strong "Stalinist" regime.

At a meeting of the Communist Party Presidium, Bulgarian made the mistake of backing the three rebels.

Plot thwarted: Marshal M. Smirnov, K. Zhukov, defense minister, saved Khrushchev. At that time, Zhukov was an alternate member of the Presidium, entitled "to speak but not to vote."

His weight, as Russia's foremost soldier and the army's leader, thwarted the plot.

Zhukov himself was ousted later, charged with trying to build himself up to succeed Khrushchev. But nothing was done about Bulgarian.

Now, it is suggested, the election of the new parliament would give Khrushchev a nice opportunity to take a delayed revenge.

It is all pure speculation, of course, and might or might not work out.

By western standards, that would not seem to be an especially good moment to oust Bulgarian.

Signed: Many Letters
 It is Bulgarian who has signed the amazing flood of letters on a "summit" conference, disarmament and the threat of nuclear warfare which the Kremlin has sent to President Eisenhower, the prime ministers of Great Britain, France, West Germany and other allied and "neutralist" countries all over the world.

a chance to be heard.
 Herschel D. Newsom, master of the National Grange one of the big three farm organizations recommended Monday that the President sign the freeze bill. He said a veto of the bill would cut an additional 500 million dollars from farm income. There apparently are not enough votes in Congress to override a veto.

Benson said the measure, if approved by the President, would result in a substantial increase in costs of operating the farm programs, and would "perpetuate measures already proved ineffective." He said it would help pile higher the government's hoard of surplus farm commodities.

Benson has made much the same sort of statements against the freeze measure in news conferences in Washington in recent weeks. The bill would freeze price supports and acreage allotments at not less than 1957 levels.

Elvis Rolls Out Earlier Than Usual

By PHIL NEWMAN

United Press Staff Correspondent
 Fort Chaffee, Ark. (UP)—Pvt. Elvis Presley, the rock 'n' roll idol, rolled out of bed 10 minutes faster than 50 other less famous army recruits today.

"I had a good night's sleep and I decided to get up," he said.
 By the time a sergeant flipped on the lights in the barracks to wake the others up at 5:30 a.m., Presley was making his bunk.

It looked pretty good for a man with less than two days in the army and still in his civilian clothes.

Presley got into Fort Chaffee from Memphis, Tenn., where he was inducted, about midnight and so his "good night's sleep" amounted to less than five hours.

He and the 50 other recruits in his induction platoon were outnumbered four men by reporters and photographers who followed them to Fort Chaffee.

"How long do you reckon all this will go on?" Presley asked Fred Gore of Blytheville, Ark., with whom he ate breakfast.

Presley breakfasted on a baked apple, two cups of milk, three slices of toast, scrambled eggs, cold cereal and strawberry jam.

Although he is officially a 78 month private in the army, Presley was still being guided, to an extent, by Col. Tom Parker, a civilian and his manager.

While photographers were swarming about him at breakfast, Parker told Capt. Arlie Methegy, the Fort Chaffee public information officer: "Let the boys take all the pictures they want to."

After breakfast, Elvis and his fellow recruits marched off to a long building for classification tests.

Cigarette Claims Bring New Lawsuits

NEW ORLEANS (UP)—Attorneys indicated today they will seek an early new trial in the damage suit brought against two cigarette companies by a woman whose husband died of lung cancer.

A mistrial was declared in U.S. District Court Monday by Judge Herbert Christenberry after it was revealed that an investigator for the plaintiff had hired a woman to question prospective jurors about their smoking habits.

The civil damage suit was filed three years ago by Mrs. Victoria St. Pierre Partigue of Franklin, La., claiming her husband's death by lung and throat cancer was caused or hastened by heavy smoking. She said he smoked two packs of cigarettes a day from 1899 to 1954.

She filed for $779,500 damages against Liggett and Myers Tobacco Co., makers of King Bee, to bacco and Pique cigarette, and the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., makers of Camel cigarettes. She said her husband's death was caused by the products almost exclusively.

Earl J. (Jimmy) Dominguez, of Baton Rouge, La., a former police detective, told the court he had asked his sister, Mrs. Teresa Michelli, to get information about the jury's smoking habits. He said the plaintiff's attorneys, H. Alva Edmund of Baton Rouge and Melvin M. Bell of San Francisco had specifically ordered him not to talk directly with prospective jurors and that he did not know his sister had done so.

Mrs. Michelli said she had called the veniremen direct after she had been unable to learn names of their neighbors. She represented herself as a pollster making a survey for Loyola University of the South and asked questions also about the prospective jurors' ages and the number of persons in their families.

The attorneys said they had not known of the contacts until it came out in court.

Faubus to Stick With Integration Issue

LITTLE ROCK (UP)—Gov. Orval Faubus said Monday he will "not quit until this integration suit is settled."

He made the statement at the opening of the Shetland pony sales at the Little Rock livestock show grounds.

"The governor said he made the appearance to let people know he did not have 'horns' like some newspaper and magazine articles made it seem I had" after the Central High School integration crisis.

High School Has a New Musical Club

(Editor's Note: This article about a new musical fan club at Hope High School was written by David Pearson, a student.)

Have you noticed any black and white campaign type buttons around lately with the words "I Like Ludwig" and a picture of Ludwig van Beethoven? If you haven't, chances are you may see them before long, for these represent a rapidly growing fan club, presently international in its scope.

The club originated not too many weeks ago with two young Yale students, Edmund Leites and Robert Conedella, who decided to set up a full-scale drive to "Conquer the menace" — the menace being Elvis Presley. This organization now numbers around 20,000 members on 100 different campuses across the nation. These enthusiastic patrons of Beethoven do not simply eulogize the works of this master, nor the classic period of music which he represents, but they are banded together to appreciate music as it should be as a true combatting force against the "menace."

You may be interested to know that our local organization numbers around fifty members at this time. It originated in Mrs. B. C. Hyatt's glee club classes but has spread beyond this organization.

On Wednesday morning, March 26, the anniversary of the death of Ludwig van Beethoven, the high school glee club will present a special program, featuring a few of the master's works, which have been arranged for choral treatment. Such as the "Moonlight Sonata" and the well-loved "Minuet in G." Assisting in the program will be members of Mrs. McPherson's speech class who will present a skit on Beethoven as a young boy. Kenneth Gilliam, practice teacher, has assisted in directing the skit.

We understand, also, that the Hope High School Band will feature a selection of Beethoven's on their Thursday night concert.

The public is cordially invited to attend both these fine programs.

Educator Has Defense for Child Playing

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UP)—A prominent woman educator comes to the defense of junior as he heads for the sandlot instead of the spelling book.

Mrs. Rowena Shoemaker, mother of two children now grown, says the "breathing space" provided by play is a must in any education system, even though many authorities are demanding longer school hours each day, longer terms each year to see that U.S. children match Russian in book learning.

"I have heard serious suggestions that we increase the school year to 11 months; that double homework be assigned," said Mrs. Shoemaker, who for 15 years has been assistant director of the Play Schools Assn. of New York.

"Play is childhood," she said. "I'm not talking because of my job," she said, in an interview. "But nowhere have I heard the time for play defended. And I'm certain it must be, if we are to have children grow to full maturity."

"Play is childhood," she said. "But if we stop naturalness, we harm the children. They do learn while playing, but in different ways."

"I once asked a group of teachers here to define play," she continued. "One spoke up and said that play is something you do not need to take seriously."

"Yet we must. Play is the child's attempt to learn more about the world around him; to create, to live with his surroundings. It teaches teamwork, develops sportsmanship, provides the place to test ideas, to experiment."

Must Avoid Vacuum
"Certainly," she added, "there is a lot of time wasted in our classrooms. But it's because of classes too large, supplies inadequate, not enough teachers."

Mrs. Shoemaker believes, however, that the new concern over our educational system is valuable.

"Any comparison with Russia helps us to evaluate our methods," she said. "We can't keep education in a vacuum, grov-

Adoption Can't Replace Younger Parents Lost

Dear Dorothy Dix: What do you think of a couple's adopting a child when they are able to have children of their own? The case is this: We had two girls, then a boy who died (the would have been four years old now) and another boy. I'd like to adopt a boy of four to take the place of the one we lost. I'd like our little son to have an older brother and the family never has seemed quite right without the child we lost.

MRS. X.

Dear Mrs. X.: First, the question is purely academic. I'm sure, since it's doubtful that an adoption agency would give you a child as long as you're capable of bearing your own. The supply of adoptable children isn't nearly enough to go around. Furthermore, don't you think it would be a bit selfish to deprive some other couple parenthood when they aren't able to have children? As far as your family being ill-balanced is concerned, you can't play God and have things arranged just as you'd like them. How many families in your circle of friends are all-boys or all-girl families? Try again, and have your little boy be brother to a small sister or brother. I wish you all the luck and joy in the world with your fine family, but give up this adoption idea.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My girl friend and I have two wonderful boy friends but we rarely get to see or talk to them alone because of my girl friend's sister. She's an older girl with her own circle of friends but insists on barging in on our dates. She's a nice kid and we hate to hurt her feelings.

JUDITH

Dear Judith: This calls for a conference with mother. She can take snooty sister to one side and advise her tactfully when she is or is not wanted.

Dear Dorothy Dix: We've been married less than a year. Everytime I'm alone with my mother-in-law she insists on talking about how abused she and her children are. Because of this, I have avoided visiting her, and my husband is getting angry with me about it.

VINNIE

Dear Vinnie: You have entered upon a new life, and must learn to cultivate qualities you never knew you had, such as patience with other people, compassion, understanding. In the course of your life, you'll have to listen to many tiresome conversations; gruelled now. Don't avoid your mother-in-law simply because you're bored with the things she says.

Leggett Case Goes to High Court

LITTLE ROCK (UP)—The appeal of Emmett Earl Leggett from a death sentence for murder formally went to the state Supreme Court for decision today.

Leggett is in state prison pending the appeal. He was granted a stay of execution last winter pending the outcome of the appeal.

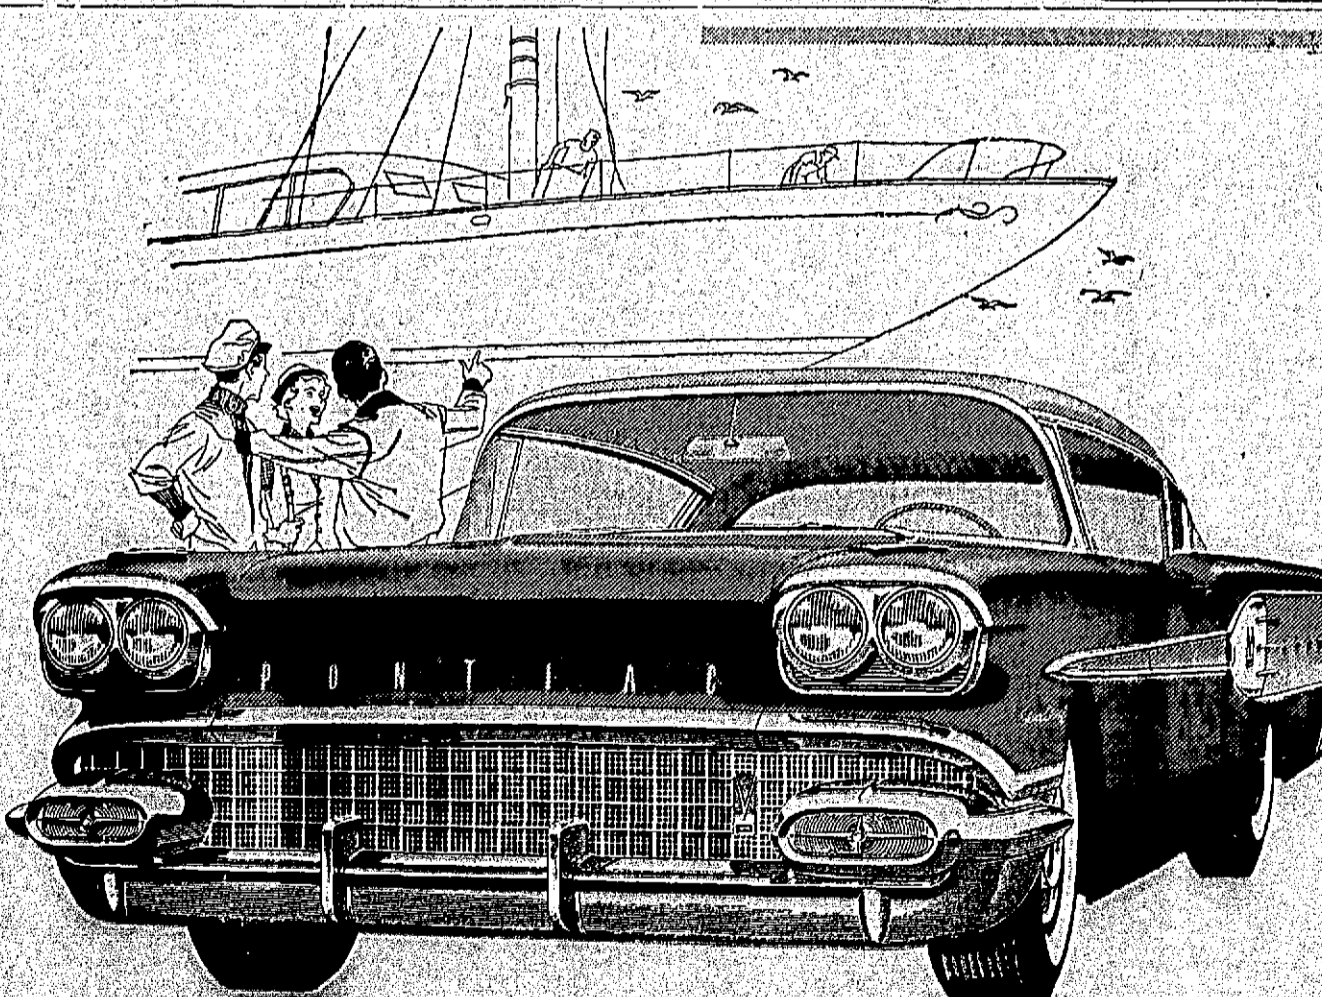

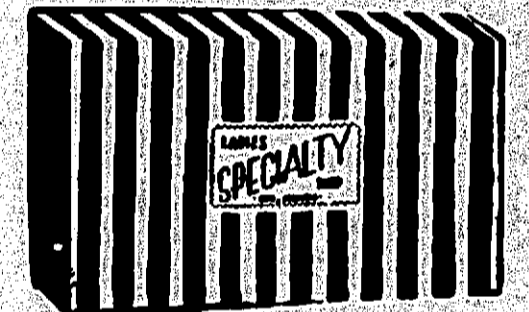

His attorney, John Bailey, of Little Rock, argued in a brief that Leggett's conviction was not legal because Pulaski Circuit Court admitted testimony from one doctor for the state of the state hospital.

The hospital examining doctor's report was admitted, Bailey said. That is a violation of the Arkansas constitution, he said. The constitution requires a person in a criminal case to be faced with witnesses against him.

Players entered include such stars as Gary Middlecott and Dick Mayer, the current National Open champion.

They join such current tournament stars as young Ken Venturi, San Francisco, latest golfer on the winter trail and Arnold Palmer, Lake Park, winner of the St. Petersburg Open last Sunday.

Writers Still Important in Television

By FRED DANZIG
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (UP)—Although Perry Como sings about being on his way to a star each Saturday, everyone knows he's really on his way to another song.

Helping him get there is comedy writer Goodman Ace, TV's top blender of badinage.

"They don't call us gag writers any more," says Goodie in his familiar, Kansas City-cum-crack-barrel voice. "We're comedy writers, or just writers. But when I worked with Tallulah (Bankhead)," he added with a dreamy look, "she called us authors."

Always On The Way
No matter what he's called, Goodie tries to limit the between-song rally on Como's NBC-TV show to two or three minutes.
"We write economically because Perry is always on the way to a song. And we use stools because he's uncomfortable standing and more at ease sitting down," Goodie volunteered.

The 59-year-old comedy craft-er, lines to others, also is remembered for his own comedy show when he and wife Jane glided into our living rooms via "Easy Aces," back in the pre-disc jockey days of radio. The Aces still keep in practice by making radio commercials — the kind that's joy to hear.

But of them all, the Como show "is the least chaotic show I've ever been with," says Ace.
"I was with Boyle and you know how chaotic that can be."

Sounds Easy
"Today, people ask me, 'What do you do?' And I say I write the Como show. They say, 'Yeah, and what else do you do?' I used to feel hurt by that, but now I take it as a tribute. I'm glad they think it as easy as it sounds."

Pulling out a sheet of legal-size yellow paper, Goodie said,
"Here's how we make a show."
One side of the paper had peeked down at him some from 8 to 9 p. m. e. s. t. and many of the minutes were filled with notes about station breaks, commercials and music.

Goodman Ace and three colleagues just have to sit around in his office and fill in the gaps with crisp, witty lines week after week.

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—John Butler, freshman football coach at the University of Pennsylvania, resigned from the post Monday to return to teaching high school history.

dio reported today that the demand for books by American authors is increasing every year in

Sugar Ray to Try to Regain Title Tonight

By JACK DUBBY
United Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (UP)—Sugar Ray Robinson will try to recapture the middleweight crown from Carmen Basilio tonight in the most fabulous indoor fight ever staged—because of its riches, significance and potential thrills.

Veteran Robinson, an all-time ring "great" and unrivaled master of the comeback, will try to win the 160-pound title for the fifth time in this return 15-rounder at Chicago Stadium, attracting the second largest indoor gate of about $400,000 and the largest theatre-TV take of more than $1,500,000.

Basilio, the tough and aggressive son of an onion farmer who took the title from Sugar Ray on a split decision last September, will try to be the first man to beat the glamorous New York boxer-puncher twice.

Basilio Favored
Carmen of Chittenango, N. Y., is favored at 9-5 to win; and if he does, the defeat doubtless will send Sugar Ray into permanent retirement—after nearly 18 years of professional fighting—at the age of 36 or 37.

Whether the great Robinson, in the sunset of his career, can salvage enough prowess to turn the tables on 30-year-old Basilio, apparently at his peak, is a question that caused a near-split in opinion among sports writers.

A United Press poll of 48 writers here for the fight showed 27 who picked Carmen to win and 21 who predicted a Robinson victory.

Because of the uncertainty regarding Robinson's prowess and the promise of another "fight of the year" when Carmen and Ray square off at 11 p. m. e. s. t., a crowd of at least 19,000 is expected by promoter Jim Norris.

No Home TV
With $325,000 already in the till Monday night, Norris expected the gate to approximate $400,000 and be second only to the record indoor $422,015 drawn by Rocky Graziano and Tony Zale at the same stadium, July 16, 1947.

The bout will not be television, but the Teleprompter Corp. will send it by closed circuit to 174 theatre-TV locations in 141 cities in the United States and Canada. It will be broadcast nationally by CBS and to Latin America by NBC and affiliates.

Each fighter will get 30 per cent of all net receipts — expected to reach at least $250,000.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

UN Secretary in Meet With Soviet Boss

MOSCOW (UP)—U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld met with Soviet Communist Party chief Nikita Khrushchev today in his planned series of "talks on disarmament and other world problems."

The discussion between the U. N. chief and the Soviet Party leader was attended by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, with whom Hammarskjöld had conferred separately earlier.

There was no immediate report of the subject of the discussion in either case, although the U.N. executive's aim here is an attempt to break the East-West deadlock on disarmament and ease the way for a summit meeting.

Hammarskjöld is expected to be here several days.

Faubus Will Not Attend Hearings

LITTLE ROCK (UP)—Gov. Orval Faubus said today he will not attend a series of Congressional hearings in Washington the end of the month on unemployment benefits.

He said the hearings serve a useful purpose, and explained the Congressmen don't get an honest picture of the situation in their home states by reading Washington papers.

"There is only one way to find out what the people are thinking out at the crossroads and that is to go out there and talk to them. Congressmen just don't have that opportunity," Faubus said. "When the Congressmen want to know

Before the train was fully stopped, he leaped out.

THE STORY: Tom Weber has left Hope Valley, the only attractive feature of which is Lily Bark.

II

It had been a chilly night and the hobo in the boxcar had huddled together as the train banged and jolted over the grades and screeched around the hairpin turns. Now the chinks of daylight were showing through the cracks what is going on out in the various states they have to invite someone up to tell them.

Faubus had been invited by Rep. Wilbur Mills (D. Ark.) to attend the hearings before the House ways and means committee.

growth of beard on his face came up, panting.

"It was a fool trick, starting that fire," Weber said.

"Sure, but who said hoboes were smart? The man regarded Weber sharply. Like Weber, he also carried a bundle wrapped up in a newspaper. "Going far?"

Weber shrugged.

"My name," the hobo said carefully, "is Paul Partridge."

"Paul Partridge?"

"I thought you'd know the name."

"I've heard it, but I didn't think Paul Partridge would be riding in a boxcar."

Partridge grinned. "Sometimes it's a very good way to travel."

"You've been around."

"Some."

"You look like a fella I once saw in Galatia."

"I've been there. But I've also been in Cheyenne and in Denver, in St. Lake and Placerville. My name is Tom Weber."

"Weber?" Partridge's face screwed up in thought. "I guess I never knew anyone named Weber."

He looked out of the cottonwoods, toward the road that paralleled the railroad right of way. "Wonder how far it is to Barkerville?"

"About 18 or 20 miles."

"How would you know?"

"Barkerville's my home town."

Partridge whistled softly. "Been away, eh?"

Weber made an impatient gesture of dismissal. "What difference does it make?"

"None, I guess. Only I'm going to Barkerville and I'd kinda like to get a rundown on the place."

"Nothing to run down. It's cow country. All right, when there's rain and grass, the country's fine. Most of the time, though, it's a dry land and things aren't so good. The town of Barkerville's a few houses and stores."

"How big?"

"Fifty-six people, maybe. Probably a little bigger, now that there's a railroad running through it. I guess they've put in a depot and maybe some loading pens."

"You've been away quite a spell," Partridge said.

"No, but a fellow who wrote me a letter said Barkerville was a kinda busy place. County seat."

"It was a county seat when I left. If it hadn't been for that there wouldn't have been more than one store and saloon in Barkerville. It's a poor country."

"Who's a fella name of Alderton?"

"A rancher."

"How about Denver?"

"Mike Denver used to own the saloon, although I guess he also ran some cattle on a little place he had. Denver was the man who had sold the whisky to his father. "Denver suit for you?"

"Uh-huh."

"It wouldn't be Walter Alderton," Weber went on, "although come to think of it, Alderton would be pretty odd by now. His son, Jeff, might be."

"Yeah, Jeff, that's right. The fella who's running for governor."

Tom Weber had been away from Lobo Valley for a long time. Eleven years.

It was early evening when Weber and Partridge dropped off a freight 100 yards from the depot in Barkerville. "See you," and with a wave, disappeared into the darkness.

Weber looked toward the blaze of lights ahead. Barkerville had grown a lot.

A man stood on the platform regarding Weber as he came up. He was a lean, sardonic-eyed man with a star pinned to his shirt pocket.

"You get off that freight!" he asked of Weber.

"Make any difference?"

"We got a jail here for hoboes!"

"I'm just passing through."

"Then pass. Don't figure on spending the night here."

Weber turned into Barkerville's Main Street. Eleven years ago it had contained a saloon, a blacksmith shop, a general store and a half-dozen houses. Now both sides of the street, for two blocks, were lined with buildings, most of them business establishments.

A restaurant caught Weber's eye. He fingered the two coins in his pocket, a quarter and a dime. It was 35 cents more than he had when he had left Barkerville, he was returning richer than he had left. And 11 years older.

He entered the restaurant. There were four or five patrons at tables, but the counter was deserted. Weber took a stool near the front and consulted the menu scribbled on a blackboard.

"Coffee and pie," Weber said to the waiter, a bleary-eyed man of about 50.

He ate the pie and drank the coffee and left the restaurant. Outside, he stopped to look down the street.

The man with the star, who had cautioned him not to spend the night in town, came up.

"I told you," he said grimly, "git movin'."

Weber was conscious of the weight of the parcel under his arm. In jail they would probably open it up and discover the revolver—a revolver that hoboes do not carry.

"All right," he said. "I'm goin'."

A man came walking along the sidewalk, a heavy-set man, well in his 50's. Weber started to pass him, and as he did, the man suddenly threw out his arm.

"Wait—! know you!"

"Mr. Eads," said Weber.

"Tom— Tom Weber!" cried Marshall Eads. One hand gripped Weber's shoulder, the other caught his hand and pumped it.

"It's good to see you, boy. I was beginning to think you'd never come home."

"You know this man, Mr. Eads?" asked the man with the star.

"Know him?" cried Eads. "Why, his dad and Sam Barker were the first settlers in this valley. The name of this town coulda been Weberville as easy as Barkerville."

"Weber," mused the deputy sheriff. "I don't seem to recall the name."

"Of course you don't. You're a Johnny— Come— Later. Why, there was a time when . . ."

Eads winced and his words trailed off, but he caught Weber's arm. "Tom, I've got to talk to you!" He began to propel Weber

West Prescott HB Club Meets With Mrs. Henry

The home of Mrs. Dawson Henry was beautifully decorated with arrangements of spring flowers on Wednesday afternoon when she was hostess to the West Prescott Home Demonstration Club.

Mrs. Henry, vice president, presided over the meeting. Roll call was answered with "One Way to Make Your Self Well Groomed."

A demonstration on "Uses For Brown Paper Bags" was given by Mrs. Ernest Adam. Miss Sara McGill, County HD Agent, spoke on "The Care of New Cotton Fabrics" and compared personalities to vegetables.

There was a man who lived by the side of the road, and he sold hot dogs.

He was hard of hearing, so he had no radio.

He had trouble with his eyes, so he rarely read a newspaper or looked at television.

But he sold good hot dogs. He put signs up on the highway, telling people how good they were and where his stand was.

And people bought.

He increased his meat and bun orders. He bought a bigger stove to take care of his trade. Finally his son came home from college to help him.

Then, something happened. His son said, "Father, haven't you been listening to the radio? Haven't you been reading the newspapers or watching television? There's a recession on. European affairs are terrible. The domestic situation is worse. Everything's going to pot."

Whereupon the father reasoned, "Well, my son's been to college . . . he reads the papers and he listens to the radio and television . . . he's an expert . . . he ought to know."

So, the father cut down on his meat and bun orders . . . took down his advertising signs . . . and he was so worried about the future that he didn't try to sell his hot dogs. His business fell off almost overnight.

"Son, you're right," said the father. "We certainly are in the middle of a terrible business slump."

My friends, Americans are great rumor spreaders. We can talk ourselves into a depression by taking the "experts" too seriously. Let's just keep on "sawing wood." Think it over!
